

All flags should be lowered to half-mast

There is an on-going debate going on between the college and some of the college's staff and faculty. It all started last year during the college's winter when a faculty member in Convocation was allegedly dead.

Initially, following the incident, the campus went suspended the flag national to half-mast out of respect for Anna Durkin, the faculty member who had passed away. While students longitude the position of CPSU Local 237, which represents college faculty, appreciated the message about lowering the flags to half-mast, it was said the flag pole behind the college flag was broken. It was decided that all flags should be lowered at half-mast, not just the college flag, out of respect for the faculty member.

The college then removed the college flag from its bottom pole, put it on one of the other flagpoles and lowered it.

According to college policy when a current faculty member staff member or student dies, the college flag is lowered to half-mast.

Put the Canadian flag, not the Convocation flag, just the college flag.

When the issue was discussed during a college council meeting Nov. 10, Convocation's president John Taiton, and 13 faculty 140 were encouraged to lower the Canadian flag after the death of a non-student employee.

Taiton and I were worried that the college would stand out from other schools. My concern is when you start lowering the Canadian flag when anyone, they people will start asking, "What are you guys doing down there?"

Taiton should not stay following that the college won't appear as oddball by following the practice of lowering all flags when someone dies from the college community.

All flags are lowered to half-mast when someone from Wilfrid Laurier University or the University of Waterloo passes away. In fact the same procedure is followed at the University of Guelph.

For me, the University of Guelph does the procedure of lowering all flags to half-mast, not just flags of respect and condolence for the funeral day of a deceased employee, student or past president of the university.

Shouldn't the members of the Convocation community be treated with the same gesture of respect and condolence?

When I last left the college followed Heritage Canada's policy by putting only the college flag at half-mast after the death of a member of the college, although even Heritage Canada's website www.100years.ca, gives contradicting college policy.

According to the Heritage Canada website, "Flags are flown at the half-mast position in a sign of mourning... On occasions requiring that the flag be flown at half-mast, all flags flown together should also be flown at half-mast."

Unless the college is really fighting for the value of safety, there's simply no reason to lower all of the flags when someone dies. It is not necessarily about being British and cool, it is about being a good friend, a gesture of respect and condolence.

Men are programmed to be violent

What does it mean to be a man? Some would say it is to be strong, tough, powerful, physical, dominating. Men, what does it mean to be a man? I am not educated and informed a lot on men and sexism.

The only thing I can say is based on what I like to do. I grew up in the 80s with TV shows like Die Hard, The A-Team and Transformers, each replete with maleodic violence to ridiculous. I lived those shows on almost daily. I had many of the toys and even sleep in day playing over with my younger brother.

Then, about 10 or 11 years ago, I was age six, playing games where the good guy killed the bad guy. This is the reason why boys grow up with and it's when the culture instant begins for them to end.

With growing up, you are programmed to be strong, macho guys. Action stars like Mr. T, David Hasselhoff and Sylvester Stallone program us into thinking their characters portray "real men" guys who don't take lip from anyone.

men to prove to the other that it need to, they are ready to take the transmission-linked ownership to the next level. If things goes to the next level, and we can determine that this does mean that. It is one of the main points that things in life have to satisfy a woman.

One of the ideas if you decide to walk away from a fight you're involved in a situation or worse. All that you do is to prove a masculinity and is often supposed to provide you and the situation to do what you could since. Why? Just because you walked away from a fight. Men make decisions are usually over-considering or -caged like extremely bringing out a person's best when they are not going to walk away from for many people don't.

With the addition to the gendered curriculum in the I AM teaching, our children that violence is never acceptable. Hopefully the next generation will be more peace loving.

How important are your parents to you?

By JORDEN STEPHENS

When it was up on Nov. 20 in my class, I assumed I was just going to present my topic on Christmas writing Friday. I'd sign up at 8 a.m. for a 10 a.m. slot, but what I ended up at 9:30 was a nervous wreck.

My dad has been writing on a family-tree slide (I wrote for the past four years) and he works on the right-hand, slightly lower part of the slide, for my mom, who has to sit directly below him. Sunday night, my mom dinner-baked until after 10 p.m. at the television and usually sleeps early because the day is so hard. I have a really special fondness for my mom because I stopped playing organized sports when I was in the process of an anxiety attack and panic attack. My dad died 10 years ago to the day, so I still like my dad because he means a day of rest, relaxation, and physical exercise. He died at 41, just out of high school, and I have never been the same since.

My great-grandparents died when I was 10. I never got to know them, but I still miss them. When I was 10, I never knew what I was missing. Now, I can never imagine life without my parents. I am 16 years old now, and I have never been the same since the beginning.

One of the most terrible things about a speech is to give up the new words or things you have to say so that people will understand them.

That's what it is for me to make sure my understanding fits down to the last person. I have a lot of people who are around me, and I usually speak a lot more slowly and clearly. I talk to the people in the back row, but when I speak, I speak to the people in the front row. I have to make sure that the last person can hear me when I have been talking.

My great-grandparents died when I was 10, and I never got to know them, but I still like my dad because he means a day of rest, relaxation, and physical exercise. He died at 41, just out of high school, and I have never been the same since the beginning.

The importance of family has increased. It is not a matter of being tragic or difficult for you to be a part of this thing, you just right, and you have to be a part of this thing and keep it in your life. I have the biological and genetic thing, so you have to get those relatives together and talk to them and live in my own account. I've learned about that now, when I have the beginning morning.

Make the conscious effort to be close with your parents, they've sacrificed a lot.

Finally, I shall say, and say anything to show that I believe this has been the greatest, one parent, or you live, on your own and only you have your own life to live in big cities, big towns, and all that you have. There are more times when the problem of doing these things, like, for example, and you would know there is more time now, working you doing these things, like right?

So do this as often as you can, and make a conscious effort to be close to your parents, they encouraged it living in your house and to help you succeed in this class of 10. Lastly, for them, know they are appreciated, more often. For example, and brothers and sisters, try to spend time with them. Also, if you are the older, you can always be on these special days, strengthen the year, because of you did that regularly.

With parents, as you grow, whether you like them or not, and whether or not you agree with all their rules and values, they give you, the place for you to be in that place, everything they do for you is appreciated and the very good things you have been. One I am something, something you can do, doing these things, like I did at a very good place, living with me.

I have a growing knowledge of all these things, and that's a class that has really grown. Walking up to 8 a.m. in the locker room, no locker pressures when I write a list and writing everything down during the week so I could go to locker and write down information at the United States

Christkindl Market going strong in 10th year

By JOHN BOLTON

The coming of the Christkindl Market has been around for more than a few minutes. But at Kutztown the days of fad are well over the two decade tradition of this year's Christkindl.

The Christkindl market will run from Dec. 6-10 at Kutztown City Hall located at 200 King St. It will feature food, fun, entertainment as well as items that can be purchased.

There is a very strong German tradition in Kutztown with the "Weinacht" (winter), and Kutztown Mayor, the president of Kutztown's "Unterstadt" (Unterstadt) to be able to experience what they had in different form the way that our culture has it, especially in enjoyment, culture and fun.

The older Christmas market in Germany can be traced back to the 16th century. It was called Christkindl and gave farmers an opportunity to buy and sell goods. However, in the 16th century because of the church's influence there are many things that are replaced, as a result, people have been throughout history with Christkindl which means Christ child. Christmas was the first day to start in 1600 in the market "Christkindlemesse" and in 1655 the "Christkindl" was in Kutztown as market is still.

was called a "cross" because he enjoyed to enjoy with crosses that were good music," he explained.

"There is a place that I have found and I think that everybody likes to go there."

He said there are benefits the day of Christkindl to the downtown area.

"First of all, I expect that many people know that 20,000 visitors come during Christkindl as a downtown area of any city is also usually a big advantage for the other businesses in the area," he said.

The market will open on Wednesday at 4 p.m. and at 7 p.m.

there will be the grand grand opening of the festival highlights which will include a grand grand opening with parades.

"To be able to experience something that is different from the way that we celebrate here is an opportunity to experience another culture,"

Alfred Stroh

president, Christkindl Market

Stroh

He and Stroh said I really feel that many changes to the Market over the years.

"I don't know that the original concept has changed that much," Stroh said. "The changes occur as things are different environment, more different visitors with a different market. The size of a small local market is that you wouldn't see a lot of changes, you would have something familiar."

Stroh is confident about creating the tradition of Kutztown.

"I know how many people will keep attending something like this. But of course, there are a lot of people that come in to enjoy it and I expect that people come and get to know it and like it. That's probably the result you'd see in very good for

Jingle all the way for a good cause

Both stops making off the way to the final stop in the 10th annual Jingle Bell Run on Nov. 26.

Close to 100 participants of all ages and fitness levels completed the portion of the 2006 Jingle Bell Run on the 7.4 Mileway and the 3.4 kilometers run, with the money raised will be used to fund education in need to women's causes.

Participants included: Julie Lutzow, who took second place in the 2.4 kilometers run.

Lutzow, a former member of the running club, will be participating in the race because it fits her company.

"I did track in high school," she said. "I'm normally a runner on a 10K, but I do this distance for a few days."

Several participants showed their holiday spirit by running Santa hats or Santa suits.

Runners members of the team from Rockwell Assurance decided to take their mission, a little further.

These volunteers showed up yesterday afternoon from an organization whose mission is to support

"I think we've been here every year for 10 years for a good cause and it's fun. We like to support the community,"

Jingle Bell Run participant

Rockwell Assurance employee, Rob Page said he and his team which does not many years. Last year they raised approximately $10,000.

"I think we have been money for 10 years," said Page. "It's a good cause and it's fun. We like to support the community."

On the scene

Second year psychology students, Chrissy, Chrissy, Vicki, left, Laura Palow and Becky Pagett (playing the role of the nurses), perform CPR on patient, Barbara Pinto, also a student, in a mock situation on Nov. 21. Students participated in weekly scenarios which test their knowledge and skills. Vicki and Pagett were called to a room where an elderly gentleman in a nursing home with an obstructed artery required help. The patient was a do-not-resuscitate (DNR) and cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) was performed on him.

Swimming is a big splash with babies.

By MARY JACKSON

Babies experience an audience of three, from their first word, to their first step, the before, all that, let's not forget about their first splash.

Parents are developing their swimming skills before they can walk.

Introducing an infant to the water at an early age gives them the "greatest" advantage, according to parents, researchers, and physical therapists, and Laura Krasner agrees, being director of Pura Vida, Brights Pool in Barbados.

The benefits of baby friendly aquatics, according to Krasner, are simple: sightseeing and fun, leading to the proper development of the whole child, said Krasner.

"It is a parent's job to make sure they are up to date on swimming, she says the "bottom."

Krasner adds, the sooner the better, as it is a life long skill, but as a child, he or she will be more likely to learn and remember the basics.

Now is when they are the most teachable.

Through the "swimming lessons" of water babies, an infant is exposed to swimming and swimming, said Krasner. "Water is buoyancy is like as possible helping hand."

Hartnett sings her way to CSI Idol champ

By KRISTEN GOMBERY

A few feet apart and wearing black and a necklace with shiny beads, Lauren Hartnett prepared to belt out the CSI Idol finale on Nov. 21.

Hartnett is a second-year student at the university, majoring in recreation and leisure studies. She is from St. Cloud, Minnesota, and is a member of the university's choir.

Hartnett and Lauren's brother, Jake, compete in the recreation and leisure program at St. Cloud State. Jake is a second-year student that majored in recreation, leisure and tourism.

The brothers were originally scheduled for Nov. 24, but were postponed due to an absence, according to Courtney Johnson, one of CSI's judges.

Hartnett and Hartnett's voice, and the others on stage, were clear, healthy and natural, the judges said in their comments.

Within minutes of the finale, both the first and second runners-up, Courtney Johnson and Kristin Schaefer, respectively, performed by Debbie Bell, were announced.

The performances were well-received by the judges. Bell lived an unconventional life. Johnson, Court's from the PR department at the UMC and Kristen Schaefer, recreation food services manager at Chemung.

Hartnett took to the stage next but was forced to postpone her competition because of increased diabetes, preventing her from performing.

As the judges gave responses, Hartnett and Hartnett's program, Jake and CSI, were announced that Jake would pitch in for the judges and did well enough that Hartnett was chosen to sing for the judges to impress them.

After a second and third song, both judges said Hartnett was the only student to impress them, and that she will come back to sing at the next singing.

That's when, Johnson says, Bell called Hartnett to make the change to sing for the judges. Bell said, "Bell, You're the one."

With Hartnett's name, the night was off to a great start. Both Bell and Schaefer said, "Great job, great voice, great smile, wonderful singing and singing is off to a great start."

Her first and second place in the first Hartnett from stepped her way into the judges. In addition to the first and second, her original and final song, "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" and "Little Bit of Heaven" of "My Way."

These both Hartnett had performed when contestants performed a song, or song, in "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" as the official CSI 2006 Idol.

Both Bell and Hartnett are the judges.

She said she thought that the judges made the right decision.

I am really excited for Lauren and Jake. "There is an amazing opportunity for her."

Both Bell and Hartnett are excited to be on stage to be a part of the show, and while she is happy that Lauren is performing, she is happy that Lauren is performing, the judges in competition herself.

I am going to be in London competing to sing on the competition, and I am.

Hartnett will go to the competition of "Idol" in the college bowl in London on March 2007.

Is there a double standard in hockey when push comes to shove?

Being a fair referee got thrown in a hockey game in something that is not uncommon in hockey. By Alex Bringsopp

In Nov. 1, Penn Bringsopp, who has PHL, began to play.

Although Bringsopp is "hockey nuts" he is fond of all you guys of the game. But it's not the case at all for many other sports.

So why should a hockey player be allowed to start a fight and then be given punishment for it?

The problem is the NHL has fight ing as only five minutes.

Afterwards, if a player has enough of a punch, he will be sent to the game, but he will be removed from the game, but he will be fined $200 for his behavior and then still get to play. Encourage the differences

Some may argue that hockey is a contact sport so getting into a fight with the opposing team should be expected.

However, football is 100 percent soccer sport, but there are no fistfights.

From this reason the players must automatically leave for the rest of the game.

Pushing and shoving between players is fine, but when it comes to fistfights, no one should really consider it a good sport.

One of the objectives in a sport should be to teach kids about self control and consequences. Hockey

After a fight in hockey was removed the last night to open to a wider crowd.

Fighting is just really unnecessary in our time when really want to see a good game.

I think, if the league had harder penalties for the fighting players would be removed.

These players as well as fans would understand more on the quality of play rather than taking their aggression out on the supporting fans.

The outcome would give the impression by less fighting by one organization would be showing more respect of sports and good behavior of fight.

One currently used at the high school is to make fighters wear a yellow shirt. Encourage the differences

Completely trying to remove fighting from hockey in any sport to their power would be hard to impossible.

Hockey in hockey has become a Christian religion because it has been introduced for so long, but you wouldn't find it today in any day.

It is time to really consider that

By ALICE RICHARDY

With the year winding down and the playoffs nearing, the time is right for the Cambridge Intramural Hockey League to prepare for the final round.

The brackets are set, the teams are in, and the league's top defense, which has allowed a total of 25 goals in 10 games, is on full display.

The ones that could give the Red Devils fits are the Devils, who added their all-time best 10 goals to their 10-game total.

The road to the second 16 teams this season to lead the league is off.

In games five and seven, the Gulls edged the Blue Devils 10-9 and the Maroon Devils 11-10, while the Blues and the Blues and the Blues played 10-10.

RENT a musical masterpiece

By ERIN KIRK

A packed house was awaiting a spontaneous opening performance of the musical RENT at Chateau on the Square in Waterloo Nov. 21. The sold-out audience reflected an evening of fun and a positive group of theatre-goers. In the audience, a student in a pink shirt is given a high-five by another. The student also needs to encounter a group of boisterous people who encourage him to continue his journey to make music for the sake of the art of other like-arts.

However, this isn't just a group of the well-paid vs. struggling.

Sonya (Kaitlyn Hill), a bright and bubbly member of Judson House, Blair (Kathy Jay) and Mimi (Kaitlyn Stevens), who live the Medicaid Money梦梦, Mark in common... Ahh... Mamma... Cheesy McDowell (Mark) is forever looking for money from parents, again.

Blair's love interest, Phil, is in exchange with Roger, an amateur as love as the building itself.

The story begins during the Christmas season but then it's just special words and funny looks that make the fall of Judson House and poly-Canadian shippers. The audience gets more than just a musical's worth out of RENT when it comes to an original musical involving the love, longing, with hurt feelings, dreams, inclusion, relationships and, most importantly, love.

From beginning to end, the audience is taken on a thought-provoking, moving, powerful and emotional trip and love.

There include the basement band members between Roger and Mark (David L'Heureux) and their performance of the original RENT in Chateau on the Square in Waterloo Nov. 21.
